

CHLNet/LEADS Collaborative Webinar

From Theory to Practice, Creating Learning that Sticks April 19, 12:00 to 1:00PM EDT

Register yourself and your colleagues for our webinar on Leadership Development in Canada. This free, interactive session is available to all CHLNet Network Partners and LEADS Collaborative clients.

We all know that people learn in a variety of ways, and that learning that happens close to the work we do is most effective. There are all sorts of models of learning for adults in the workplace and a ton of research that indicates how to build effective learning programs. Most research speaks to idealized approaches and leaves the Leadership Development professional to figure out how to make that work in the context of their organization. This webinar will provide some practical ideas and tools about how to design effective learning programs and experiences that are most likely to provide effective learning systems that measurably change behaviour and culture.

This webinar will use the 70:20:10 model of learning as a platform to discuss how to create a learning framework for leadership development and describe how our organization threaded and embedded LEADS through the development of learning programs. Webinar hosts Stevie Colvin and James McAndrew will share their organization's story, the framework they've designed and offer some insight into lessons learned along the way.

We look forward to seeing you at this webinar and sharing one way of working toward better and more effective learning programs.
